Letter from THE EDITOR

By Debby Zelman Rapoport

Thirty years. When I look back to 1996, when my children, Brian and Julie, were 9 and 6 years old, I feel sentimental about the years that have passed. When Andy, my co-creator, presented the idea of starting a local magazine, the word “sure” rolled off my tongue – a word of possibility that has left my lips several times before my brain had time to process what I had agreed to do.

As with anything, there have been ups and downs – believers and doubters. Back when I started, a friend from college told me there was no way this would last without a business plan – something I have never created, even to this day. My dad, who knew I get bored easily, doubted my commitment to making it last. Then, my mom, an optimist with an established career as an employment counselor, challenged me to make a few more phone calls each week to solicit advertising and further build the business.

What started as a project to occupy some time and earn a few extra dollars grew into a commitment to our community – to learn about its people and businesses and to tell their stories.

Here we are, 30 years later, and I’m so grateful for the continued support, the people I’ve met along the way, and the stories I’ve been privileged to share.

Although I’ve published recaps at other milestones, this one feels different. It’s more heartfelt.

My sister, Darcy Alter, lost her battle with cancer 11 years ago next month. I still vividly remember sitting on the beach with her in the Bahamas, in July 2015, just a few months before she passed. I asked if she was ready to go back to the room to get ready for dinner and she told me to go ahead. She wanted just a few more minutes by herself to take in the beauty of the beach, as she knew this would be her last opportunity to do so. I remember her repeatedly telling me that the most important thing to her was making memories with her family – memories that they would carry throughout their lives.

Since then, I’ve felt grounded in knowing that every day is a blessing. None of us knows what tomorrow may bring, so let’s live our best lives and fulfill our dreams today.

I am extremely grateful to have reached this milestone. I’ve mentioned in past articles – and I mention again – that the longevity of this magazine is the result of a community effort: our city, schools, chamber, advertisers, businesses, residents, and everyone who supports me behind the scenes to bring this magazine to life each month.

Beachwood is a small community with big stories. I never would have believed that, 30 years after its inception, there would still be more stories to tell. I’ve been privileged to meet so many change makers, risk-takers, and creatives who are making a difference every day.

I hope that, along the way, I’ve inspired you in one way or another – through the stories I’ve shared or columns I’ve written.

I’m humbled and grateful for the messages I’ve received on this 30-year milestone, some of which I share on these pages.

A tagline we’ve used all along is, “Everyone has a story to tell. Tell yours in Beachwood Buzz.” I’m grateful for each of you. I encourage you to follow your dreams, reach out, and share your story. Again, we don’t know what tomorrow may bring.

Thank you for your support. I look forward to seeing what comes next.

With heartfelt gratitude,

Debby ♥

Community Messages on Our 30th Anniversary

I was first introduced to Debby through Brian Sokol, a fellow photographer in the Beachwood Photography Group. Debby heard that I had composed music for marathons and called to see if I would be interested in doing a story – which evolved into the cover story in January 2026.

Her article changed my life and our first meeting turned into a great friendship. Debby is an incredibly talented writer and could easily be a novelist. However, to regularly publish the Buzz, she has shown her prowess as a skilled reporter, asking key questions and then organizing her thoughts into a concise story. She somehow was able to put everything together, and present my life and accomplishments (so far), in just a few pages.

The feedback I’ve received about my article has been terrific, and I have reconnected with friends from more than 50 years ago. I am forever grateful for all she has done for me. Congratulations on 30 years of life-changing articles.

Community Messages on Our 30th Anniversary

When I was growing up, I remember always being so excited when Beachwood Buzz arrived at our house – I would pore through the pages to see names that I recognized. Even now, when I visit my parents' house and see the magazine on our dining room table, I make a beeline for it and do the exact same thing.

Local news is such a vital resource for every community, and at a time when so much local coverage is shrinking, I'm grateful that Beachwood Buzz is still going strong.

You have been the heart monitor for our dynamic city. Through your magazine pages, residents and visitors continue to experience our folks, the schools, and businesses that make our community so special. As president of Beachwood Historical Society, I personally thank you for highlighting, gathering memories, and weaving the stories of our Hometown Heroes and the Veterans; for sharing the beautiful photographs of our Garden Tours; highlighting our Pickleball Tournament winners; and most recently, sharing soliloquies from the Heroes Who Shaped America performance.

Beachwood Buzz serves as a vital gateway connecting us with the threads of history and knowledge – it is a catalyst for communication. Debby and her team reflect love, passion, and purpose as they continue to weave together stories that create the tapestry we call Beachwood.

~ Rosemary Nemeth (President, Beachwood Historical Society)

When my kids started Beachwood Schools and I became active in PTA Beachwood Buzz was a helpful tool for me to see what was happening in the schools and my city. Although it was a much smaller magazine back then, it helped me feel connected. I loved that it highlighted the inception of the PTO Garage Sale, and helped get the word out so everyone who wanted to could become involved. Now, 30 years after its inception, I still get excited to see Beachwood Buzz in my mailbox. I love reading Debby's "Letter from The Editor," and am grateful that we have this magazine, which helps me stay connected to Beachwood.

– Jan Kirschenbaum (Beachwood resident, volunteer)

Our family was so grateful that Beachwood Buzz featured the bone-marrow-transplant story about Marc Bakst (BHS Class of '71) donating to his brother, Alan Bakst (BHS Class of '69), when Alan developed leukemia. This summer we celebrated Alan's 75th birthday and his eighth year in remission. We believe that publicity can offer hope to other families. Thank you and congratulations on 30 years of Beachwood Buzz!

~ Marcia K Bakst (Beachwood resident)

Beachwood Buzz has been a part of my life for almost as long as I can remember. The magazine started when I was just 6 years old, and now, more than a decade into working here, I've spent roughly a third of my life as part of the Buzz family.

That's pretty special to me. I grew up with the Buzz, and in a way, I've grown up alongside it. It's more than just a magazine or a job, it's something that has been a constant in my life, and I'm incredibly proud to be a small part of its 30-year story.

~ Adam Jacob (Beachwood Buzz director of sales)

The Buzz has been supportive of all my efforts in this very busy community. Debby has found space to promote the Yarn Over Beachwood knitting and crocheting group that I founded around 20 years ago – formerly called women4women-knitting4peace. She knew how needed our projects were in other communities, both local and international. She also showcased my philanthropy, and celebrated the books I've written for children and their families. Best of all, she has shared her many talents in painting and photography shows, and by speaking to groups in our community. Thank you, Debby, for your warmth of spirit and your passion in producing Beachwood Buzz for all of us to enjoy and rely on in our community.

~ Iris November (Philanthropist, author, founder)

Thirty years ago, when I was PTA president, you approached me and told me about a community magazine you were starting. You asked if the PTA would like to have a monthly column in it.

I had so many questions. How could it be free? How would you find enough advertisers to support it? How would you gather all of the information you needed every month?

I didn't know you very well at the time, and, quite honestly, I thought you would be lucky if this magazine lasted six months!

That was my mistake – I simply didn't know you well enough! If I had known you then the way I have come to know you over the past 30 years, I would have realized that Debby Rapoport gets done whatever she sets out to do – with professionalism, kindness, fairness, caring, inclusivity, and generosity.

Of course, this new magazine was going to succeed!

Thank you, Debby, for bringing our community closer together. Thank you for enlightening residents with news, information, and wonderful stories. Thank you for helping make Beachwood the incredible city that it is.

And most of all, thank you for being you! Congratulations on 30 years of an extraordinary contribution to our community!

~ Paula Zavell Rollins (President, Beachwood Arts Council)

CREATING A BUZZ FOR 30 YEARS

CELEBRATING THREE DECADES OF BEACHWOOD'S PEOPLE, PROGRESS, AND STORIES

This month marks 30 years since the creation of Beachwood Buzz – three decades of celebrating the people, milestones, and stories that have shaped our community. This remarkable anniversary was made possible by the dedication of our team; the steadfast support of the City of Beachwood, Beachwood Board of Education, Beachwood Chamber of Commerce, and our advertisers; the many contributions of local businesses, organizations, and residents; and you – our readers. Together, we continue to preserve and share the story of Beachwood.

I am deeply grateful for the relationships formed and lessons learned throughout this journey. Month after month, I have the privilege of meeting remarkable people, witnessing meaningful change, and discovering the many ways that individuals Parkinson's disease can gradually change the way a person moves, speaks, and participates in everyday life. Steps may become smaller, movements slower, posture more stooped, and everyday activities such as getting out of a chair, turning in bed, or walking through a busy store may require more effort. At the same time, a person's voice may become softer or less clear, making conversations with family, friends, and others increasingly frustrating. These changes can be subtle at first, and the person with Parkinson's may not always recognize how much their movement or voice has changed.

Two specialized treatment programs—LSVT BIG® and LSVT LOUD®—were developed specifically to address these common challenges. Although BIG focuses on movement and LOUD focuses on communication, both programs use intensive, repetitive practice to help people with Parkinson's recalibrate how they move or speak. In simple terms, the goal is to help the brain recognize that movements or voice levels that may initially feel "too big" or "too loud" are often actually closer to normal.

Think BIG. Speak LOUD.

Helping People with Parkinson's Move and Communicate with Confidence.

LSVT BIG® is a physical or occupational therapy-based program that trains people to use larger, more purposeful movements. Treatment can address walking, balance, posture, reaching, transfers, getting in and out of bed, dressing, and other activities that are important to the individual. Practicing bigger movements can help counter the small, slow movements commonly associated with Parkinson's. Research on LSVT BIG® has reported improvements in areas such as walking speed, mobility, balance, and motor function for many participants. Just as importantly, treatment is designed around real-life goals so that improvements in the clinic carry over into the home and community.

LSVT LOUD® is a speech therapy program designed to improve vocal loudness and communication.

consistency. The goal is not simply to "shout." Instead, patients learn to produce a voice that is easier for others to hear and understand during everyday conversations. Treatment may also improve confidence when speaking in groups, talking on the telephone, ordering at a restaurant, or communicating with loved ones.

For many people, movement and communication are closely connected to independence. Being able to walk confidently across a room is important, but so is being able to clearly tell someone what you need when you get there. That is why having access to both programs can be especially valuable for individuals with Parkinson's and their families.

In Beachwood, patients can conveniently access both services in the same building.

- Balance Solutions Physical Therapy provides LSVT BIG® with clinicians who can address mobility, balance, strength, gait, and functional movement.
- Nicole Gerami, LLC, provides LSVT LOUD® speech therapy to address voice and communication.

Having these complementary services in one location can make it easier for patients and families to build a coordinated approach to managing the movement and communication challenges associated with Parkinson's disease.

Parkinson's is progressive, but that does not mean people should wait until symptoms become severe before seeking help. Early intervention can help establish effective movement and communication strategies, while people who have been living with Parkinson's for years may also benefit from specialized treatment.

If you or someone you love is noticing smaller steps, slower movement, balance problems, a softer voice, or increasing difficulty being understood, an evaluation may be an important next step.

Parkinson's can reduce voice volume and make speech sound soft, breathy, monotone, or difficult to understand.

Through structured exercises and functional speaking tasks, LSVT LOUD helps patients use a healthier, stronger voice with less effort and greater

Top Five Celebrity Estate Planning Mistakes

We recently lost one of my favorite artists, Dolly Parton. Although Jolene has always been my favorite Dolly song, I found myself reflecting on Coat of Many Colors while listening to a live band perform it the other night. It occurred to me that every family has its own coat of many colors, woven from the people, stories, traditions, and memories that make it unique. A thoughtful estate plan helps protect the people you love and preserve the story your family has created.

It is too early to know what arrangements Dolly made for her estate, and those details may remain private, which is often a sign of effective planning. Unfortunately, other well-known entertainers have not been as fortunate. You might assume that the rich and famous have access to the very best legal advice, particularly when planning their estates. Yet even some of the world's most successful celebrities have left behind poorly drafted documents, outdated plans, or no estate plan at all. Their mistakes have resulted in expensive litigation, unnecessary taxes, family conflict, and court proceedings that continued for years after their deaths.

In this article, we will examine some of those mistakes, explain how the same issues can affect any family, and discuss the steps you can take to avoid them.

1.) Michael Jackson: Failing to Connect Assets to Trust

Michael Jackson planned ahead and knew he would need to protect assets in a trust in advance of his passing. Unfortunately, Jackson's mistake was that he failed to officially "fund the trust" before he died. Since the funds were not where they needed to be at the time of his death, they were unable to be distributed; and his estate, worth $500 million when he died, had to go through probate court. When you are planning your estate, an important final step is to link your financial accounts to your trust to ensure it is funded. This can be accomplished simply by naming the trust as the beneficiary of the account. In our estate planning process, we guide you from start to finish, including working with your financial planner to associate your accounts with your trust, ensuring a smooth transition of funds to your beneficiaries.

2.) Whitney Houston: Choosing the Wrong Trust

In the case of Whitney Houston, she astutely started planning her estate early in life, creating a will at age 30. After her daughter, Bobbi Kristina, was born, she knew she needed to update her will to include Bobbi as a beneficiary of her estate, so she elected to add a testamentary trust provision. Unfortunately, a testamentary trust was not the best option because it requires settlement in probate court after death and thus leaves all documents, such as her will, open to the public. Instead, Whitney could have created a revocable family trust, avoiding probate, while also allowing her flexibility to make updates as life events occurred. The family trust would have also provided asset protection for her daughter and unborn children.

3.) James Gandolfini: Disregarding Estate Taxes

Sopranos star, James Gandolfini, created his will just six months before dying unexpectedly of a heart attack - a great reminder that the best time to start planning your estate is now. Similar to Whitney Houston, Gandolfini's use of a will, instead of a living trust, meant his final wishes can be viewed by anyone across the internet. His greater mistake, though, was to leave only 20% of his assets to his wife, leaving the other 80% going to his kids and other associates subject to a massive combined federal and state tax rate of 55% (in his case, approximately $30 million). Instead, he could have left 100% of his assets to his wife tax-free due to marital deduction laws and she in turn could have established trusts naming their children and family friends as beneficiaries, or they could have created a joint revocable family trust in both of their names. It is important for you and your spouse to discuss your estate plans with each other and your attorney, whether you would like your assets passed on together or separately. A good lawyer can help you strategically establish and execute your estate plan to take care of your family and avoid leaving them with a major tax bill after you are gone.

4.) Etta James: Failing to Name Powers of Attorney

A common theme in estate planning advice is to get your plan started earlier than you think you will need to. As for Grammy-winning recording artist Etta James, she did establish an estate plan naming her son, Donte James, as her sole power of attorney for medical and financial matters. However, her husband, Artis Mills, disagreed with some of Donte's decisions and argued that his power of attorney status was invalid because Etta was already afflicted with Alzheimer's at the time of his appointment. It is important to establish your financial and healthcare powers of attorney long before you think you will need them. These are two separate designations and the roles can be assigned to two different people or the same person - you can also name one or more successors to ensure that even if your first choice is unable or unwilling to serve in this capacity you have a back-up plan in place.

5.) Marlon Brando: Making Verbal Promises

It is said that before his passing, Brando made a verbal promise to his long-time housekeeper that he would give her his home, but this was not reflected in his court-validated will. Without a written provision established in his estate plan, the housekeeper was legally entitled to nothing. It is important to remember that verbal commitments are not enough for the court of law, and if there is any part of your estate that you do in fact wish to grant to family, friends, or otherwise, it needs to be established in writing as part of your will and/or trust. This is why it is consequential to update your estate documents regularly for any life changes, including new marriages or divorce, the birth or adoption of new children or grandchildren, changes in your health, income, or state of residence, as well as any promises made to friends and family for physical or monetary assets.

No matter how big or small your estate is, it is important to properly lay out your wishes in an established estate plan. For more information or to schedule a complimentary consultation, contact us at 216-573-3723 or dan@baronlawcleveland.com.

BHS Grad Sings Taylor Swift's Praises in New Biography

By June Scharf

Emily Yahr, a 2004 BHS graduate, was precociously and preternaturally aware of two things early in her life – she wanted to pursue journalism as her career, and she knew Taylor Swift was something special after hearing her first single, Tim McGraw, in 2006. Guided by these understandings, Emily has since carved out a very successful career as a pop culture reporter for The Washington Post, and she authored Taylor Swift: The Debut Years, published this month by St. Martin's Press.

One could say she launched her career at Hilltop Elementary School by writing for the Hill Kidz Gazette, ultimately advancing to Beachwood High School's student newspaper, The Beachcomber, for which she was the sports editor (and this reporter was her advisor).

"The Beachcomber was a blast, and it helped prepare me for journalism school at the University of Maryland," Emily said in a recent phone conversation. What also captured her attention in high school and college was Entertainment Weekly magazine and the writing of reporter Josh Wolk, in particular, who recapped reality shows.

"It was some of the funniest writing I had ever experienced. It also was the first time I read something that reflected someone thinking about TV in a deeper way. (He demonstrated) there was a more elevated way to write about pop culture."

She was smitten. In fact, she remembers cutting out lines from the magazine – funny observations – and taping them to her wall.

This inclination offered a preview of her future. She later found rich source material covering pop culture and the entertainment industry for The Washington Post. But her portal into The Post was initially through the sports department where she worked as a news assistant during college and "loved seeing the inside of the newsroom," she notes.

When she graduated college in 2008, a position opened in

The Post's Style section as an editorial aide helping both the TV critic and the TV columnist who covered the topic from a business angle. She was hired.

Emily recalls how she pitched stories any chance she could to many of the editors. She also took assignments when writers weren't available. "I was desperate to have a byline of my own."

One could say she launched her career at Hilltop Elementary School by writing for the Hill Kidz Gazette, ultimately advancing to Beachwood High School's student newspaper, The Beachcomber, for which she was the sports editor.

In 2014, she was promoted to pop culture reporter. She started by recapping reality shows which required a volume of time that prevented much of a work/life balance because she was so determined to write as much as possible. That involved many late nights, often to cover a range of TV shows. "It's not a 9-to-5 job," she points out.

Now she reports on a niche interest, reality competition shows (summaries and analysis), along with movies, music and celebrity culture, specifically celebrity relationships. But she reveals that "you never know, on any given day, what you're going to end up covering." For example, when Dolly Parton died, that was where she shifted her time and attention.

As a hard copy native, Emily witnessed the transition to The Post having an online presence. She states that when she first arrived at the newspaper, there were two separate buildings for newsroom staff and those serving WashingtonPost.com worked in Arlington, Virginia. She later witnessed the merging of everything in the headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Emily mentioned that her editors have been very supportive of her, and pop music critic Chris Richards assigned her country music reviews since he knew she loves the genre. This marked the beginning of her chance to lean into the material, planting seeds for her eventual book.

That book, Taylor Swift: The Debut Years, traces how Taylor began as a teenager with big dreams, leading up to being a 14-time Grammy Award winner. Emily interviewed more than 100 sources for the project. It covers Taylor's first 10 years in Nashville where readers are transported to locations like Music Row and the Bluebird Café. Taylor was not interviewed, but that was not for lack of trying.

The impetus to write the book stems from the merging of Emily's favorite topics to cover: country music and Taylor.

"I was so intrigued by this very young singer who didn't sound like anything else on country radio and who wrote all of her own songs. I followed her for a long time – I think she's one of our most fascinating celebrities." Emily also notes that country singer/songwriters typically follow a strict path, but "Taylor forged her own way."

Emily's interest in country music extends back to her early teen years. "It's unlike any other genre. It's its own world and everything operates within a few blocks in Nashville. It's a very competitive industry, so it creates a lot of really interesting dynamics that I love covering."

With Taylor's popularity growing exponentially over the past few years, Emily believed that this new flood of fans might know little about Taylor's backstory. Plus, she had never seen a comprehensive book about Taylor's origin story. "So I thought, I can write it."

Emily's many sources included songwriters, producers, music video directors, other journalists, music label executives and fans. An interesting discovery was that "The reporting (for Taylor Swift: The Debut Years) was the most fun part because people had so many great stories that I had never heard and that had never been reported."

some of those in the country music industry admitted that they wanted to work in Nashville because Taylor inspired them.

"The reporting was the most fun part because people had so many great stories that I had never heard and that had never been reported."

Among her favorite sources were songwriters whose publishers set them up to co-write with the then 13- or 14-year-old girl and their surprise by how she arrived with so many of her own ideas.

Additionally, "many people said over and over again that they had never seen a teenage songwriter with so much confidence. They were taken aback by the clarity of her vision."

The music video director Trey Fanjoy, who worked with Taylor early on, told Emily that she noticed how assertive Taylor was, too. "She knew exactly what she wanted and didn't want her videos to look like," Trey claimed.

Emily demonstrates with her research how Taylor has remarkably never stopped creating over the past two decades. Therefore, Emily says, she is very curious about what "TS13," as fans call her upcoming album, is going to sound like.

Most recently, Emily had a foray into the Swift universe by covering Taylor's wedding as part of her Post beat, but the only heat generated that day was from the weather which was nearly 100 degrees. Most of her sources were tourists and onlookers who wondered what the commotion was all about. Her biggest takeaway was, "It was so hot!"

Emily says her overall favorite celebrity interaction was with, naturally, Taylor, and she discusses that contact at the beginning of the book, but this is a teaser – she doesn't want to give away the story because "it's so good."

Emily will discuss Taylor Swift: The Debut Years, on Thursday, Oct. 15, 7 p.m., at the Beachwood Library. She will be in conversation with Annie Zaleski, a local nationally published music journalist and author who wrote the track-by-track guide Taylor Swift: The Stories Behind the Songs.

Education is one of our strongest tools against antisemitism.

After October 7, local teacher Devorah* felt increasingly isolated as antisemitic incidents and difficult conversations became part of her daily reality. Through the Jewish Federation of Cleveland's Jewish Teachers Summit, she found a supportive community, practical resources, and renewed confidence to navigate these challenges.

At the same time, the Federation's Education Leaders Summit equipped school administrators and education professionals with the knowledge and strategies to recognize and address antisemitism, foster understanding, and build more inclusive learning environments.

Together, these programs are empowering educators across Northeast Ohio to respond to hate with confidence, compassion, and resilience—helping ensure every student feels safe and supported.

Your support empowers educators to confront antisemitism, protect students, and build a future where every classroom is a place of belonging.

Importance of Nov. 3

By Jennifer Stern

It has never been more important than now to vote in the midterm elections. It is necessary to learn about the issues and candidates beyond paid party soundbites and sensationalized commercials. The divisive polarization of our current political system has left many feeling frustrated and untethered. It is important to vote for candidates and issues that reflect the core values of our democracy. After all, we are creating the world in which our children, grandchildren, all future generations, will be living – one vote at a time.

Your vote reflects the issues that matter most to you and your family, based on your daily needs. It is important to vote for politicians who are committed to solving problems, protecting our environment (clean air, water, safe foods), strengthening our schools, healthcare accessibility, and most of all our economy in ways that truly effect our daily lives.

State and local elections directly impact the quality of your daily life. Voting in the midterm elections is critical. Your vote holds elected officials accountable to act responsibly, ethically, fairly.

Checking to see if you are registered to vote literally takes less than a minute.

Vote411.org and Vote.org are safe and legitimate websites that provide voter information by state. These sites are factual and unbiased. They support you, the voter, and not a political party or candidate.

Both sites will check your voter registration. If you are not a registered voter, you can safely register to vote on these sites. It takes less than two minutes. These sites will show you what's on your local ballot and help you locate your polling location. You can also request an absentee ballot if you are unable to vote in person.

Oct. 5 is the last day to register to vote or to update your voter registration in Ohio.

Dolly Parton Lives On in Ohio

By State Senator Kent Smith

I was a school board member when I first heard about the Dolly Parton Imagination Library and I couldn't believe it was true. The idea that this actress and musician would mail out an age-appropriate book, every month, for free to any child until their fifth birthday, was brilliant, generous and impactful.

With that understanding, I was happy to join Ohio First Lady Fran DeWine, in Warrensville Heights, in January 2020, when she announced the statewide expansion of the program.

Ohio is currently the No. 1 state in the nation for child participation in the Dolly Parton Imagination Library with more than 28 million books mailed. Seventy percent of Ohio kids are enrolled in the Imagination Library. Sign up is free and easy. To learn more and enroll, please visit www.Ohiolmaginationlibrary.org.

In January 2025, five years after Ohio announced the expansion of the Imagination Library, Ohio became the second state to offer a specialty Dolly Parton's Imagination Library license plate. Dolly's home state, Tennessee, was the first state to offer the license plate.

With each purchase of a Dolly Parton license plate, $25 will go toward Ohio's Imagination Library, specifically benefiting the county where the plate was purchased. Each plate will help to financially support the cost of mailing one child's books for an entire year. The Dolly Parton's Imagination Library license plate is available to purchase online at OPLATES.com or in person at any Ohio deputy registrar license agency.

Since her passing in late August, we have seen renewed interest in both the Imagination Library and her license plate. So, it seems like Dolly will live on in Ohio as we see more Dolly Parton books in mailboxes and more Dolly Parton license plates on the road.

More about Dolly Parton's Imagination Library

Dolly Parton's Imagination Library of Ohio mails children one free book each month until their 5th birthday.

Any child between birth and age 5 in Ohio can sign up for this free book gifting program.

Research shows that a child's brain is 80% developed before turning 3.

The Imagination Library's high-quality, age-appropriate books help children develop critical early literacy skills before starting kindergarten. To learn more and enroll, visit www.Ohiolmaginationlibrary.org.

Suburban Symphony Orchestra Presents Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony

The Suburban Symphony Orchestra will continue its 2026-2027 season with Tchaikovsky Symphony 4: Life Triumphs, Life Flows, at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, in the Beachwood High School Auditorium. Admission is free.

The concert explores the human capacity to overcome adversity through three powerful works of the Romantic era: Bedřich Smetana's The Moldau, Franz Liszt's Les Préludes, and Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4.

From the flowing waters depicted in The Moldau to the struggle against fate at the heart of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, the program reflects the orchestra's 2026-2027 season theme, Life Finds a Way: Music of Nature, Hope, and Resilience.

Cleveland native Lorenzo Lopez will serve as guest conductor. He works frequently with CityMusic Cleveland Chamber Orchestra and has appeared with the Cleveland Ballet, Orchestre Métropolitain, the Chamber Orchestra of New York, and the Romanian Chamber Orchestra.

SSO's mission is to connect with the community through free performances of symphonic repertoire. For additional information, visit suburbansymphony.org.

Kol Israel Kristallnacht Talk

Kol Israel Foundation (KIF) will continue its longstanding tradition of commemorating the anniversary of Kristallnacht by presenting Remembering the Past, Protecting the Future: A Community Conversation, with OHGMEC's Holly Hollingsworth, on Monday, Nov. 9, 7 p.m., at B'nai Jeshurun, 27501 Fairmount Blvd.

Holly serves as the executive director of the Ohio Holocaust and Genocide Memorial and Education Commission. She will participate in a parlor-style conversation with Lindsay Friedman, KIF education director. The talk will cover how Kristallnacht connects to today's antisemitism, a status report on antisemitism in Ohio, and statewide efforts to combat antisemitism through Holocaust education. She will also discuss OHGMEC's origins and role.

Testimony will be provided by Beachwood resident Eric Kisch, whose family fled from Germany to Shanghai during Kristallnacht.

Kristallnacht, also known as the Night of Broken Glass, was a series of violent antisemitic attacks across Germany on Nov. 9-10, 1938. The attacks led to the smashing of windows at more than 7,500 Jewish-owned businesses, the desecration of more than 1,200 synagogues, and the murders of at least 90 people.

The program is free, but donations are appreciated. Visit kifcle.org for more information.

Beachwood Filmmaker Brings Personal Holocaust Story to Cleveland Jewish FilmFest

Jacob Pincus, a 2021 Beachwood High School graduate, returns to the Cleveland Jewish FilmFest, where his short film, Make Me a Sanctuary, was presented in 2021. This year, he brings his first feature-length documentary, I Don't Know What I'm Doing Here, a contemporary exploration of family history, inherited trauma and Jewish identity.

The film follows Madeline "Mima" Kohn, a recent college graduate whose four grandparents were Holocaust survivors. Guided by unmarked photographs and an oral-history recording, Mima travels to Săcel, the rural Romanian village where her grandmother Esther was born. Accompanying her are Jacob and an 18-year-old Romanian translator who Mima found through Facebook.

Together, they cross fields, scale walls, and speak with local residents, searching for traces of Esther's life before the Holocaust. Their physical journey gradually becomes something more personal: an attempt to understand what can be recovered when family memories are incomplete and many of the people who could answer their questions are gone.

Jacob uses handheld footage, first-person narration, and collage-like glimpses of the trip to give the documentary the immediacy of an online video diary. The approach is intended to make Holocaust-related storytelling accessible to younger audiences without diminishing the history at its center. Although the film moves between uncertainty, frustration, and grief, it also makes room for humor, friendship, and joy.

Its selection for the Cleveland Jewish FilmFest is especially meaningful for Jacob. Before moving to Los Angeles, he began making films in his family's Beachwood basement, nicknamed the "Ja-Cove." That space later inspired the name of his production company, Cove Films.

For Jacob, the Cleveland presentation brings a deeply personal film back to the community where his own artistic and Jewish identities first developed. Through Mima's search, the documentary asks how grandchildren of survivors can carry family history forward – and how confronting what has been lost can become an affirmation of life.

Now in its 20th year, the Mandel JCC Cleveland Jewish FilmFest brings international Jewish and Israeli cinema to audiences throughout Northeast Ohio. The 2026 festival runs Oct. 8-18. Full information is listed at www.mandeljcc.org/FilmFest.

The Mayor's Message

Creating Possibilities Through Collaboration

Dear Beachwood Residents and Businesses,

Some of the most meaningful opportunities to strengthen our community begin with a simple question: What can we accomplish by working together?

Proactive collaboration allows us to combine expertise, share resources, and approach challenges from a broader perspective. Two important initiatives currently underway demonstrate how strong partnerships can expand services and create new possibilities for Beachwood residents.

City Council recently approved Beachwood's participation in First CALL — Crisis Assistance and Local Linkage — a regional program that helps first responders address calls involving mental health or behavioral health needs.

Through First CALL, our police officers, firefighter/paramedics and dispatchers will have greater access to licensed mental health professionals and trained peer support workers. These specialists can assist during crisis calls, provide follow-up support, and connect residents and families with appropriate treatment and community resources. The program also assigns a licensed mental health professional to support dispatchers and first responders.

First CALL began as a pilot program in Shaker Heights in 2022 before expanding to Cleveland Heights, Richmond Heights, South Euclid and University Heights. With Beachwood, Solon, Orange and Pepper Pike now joining, the initiative will serve nine communities.

By participating in this regional partnership, Beachwood is strengthening our safety service resources. Most importantly, it gives our first responders another tool to ensure residents receive appropriate support when they need it.

Collaboration is also central to the proposal for a new Beachwood Branch of the Cuyahoga County Public Library. The library system is leading this effort in scope and funding, with participation from the Beachwood City School District, the City of Beachwood, and Cuyahoga County.

Because the proposed location is near existing municipal and recreational facilities, the city has an important opportunity to help evaluate how these entities can work together.

Considering the broader area as a whole aims to improve access to city amenities, enhance recreational opportunities, and create a more connected community space. While the proposal remains conceptual, we are working with our partners to carefully explore what may be possible.

Finally, this issue gives us an opportunity to recognize another collaboration that has strengthened Beachwood for three decades. Congratulations to Debby Rapoport on 30 years of leading Beachwood Buzz. Through her dedication and long-standing partnership with the city, Debby has helped create a truly unique culture of connection. The publication informs residents, celebrates our community, and gives local organizations and businesses a shared voice.

Each of these examples shows that collaboration is more than an idea. It is a practical way to serve residents more effectively, use community resources thoughtfully, and build a stronger Beachwood together.

Sincerely,

Mayor Justin Berns

Legislative Update

September 8, 2026

The city is focusing on six key areas essential for the city's advancement, which serve not only as a roadmap, but as a guiding light for our city's progress. Each legislative update highlights these areas.

Sept. 8 City Council Meeting

Public Safety: City Council approved Beachwood's participation in First CALL, a regional program that connects police officers and firefighter/paramedics with licensed mental health professionals and peer support workers during mental health-related calls. Beachwood's initial cost for the first year is approximately $41,000.

City Council approved updates to Chapter 402 of the Beachwood Codified Ordinances to promote the safe use of electric scooters and electric bicycles. The updated regulations require riders under age 18 to wear protective helmets and prohibit operating an electric bicycle with its motor engaged on sidewalks, public ways, paths, or trails unless the Codified Ordinances specifically authorize it, among other regulations.

Sustainability: Council members voted to increase funding for the City's Food Recycling Program with Rust Belt Riders to an amount not to exceed $34,500. Growing participation and collection volume prompted the addition of another collection container, with monthly program costs expected to reach approximately $3,100 over the next five months.

Infrastructure Improvements: City Council approved funding for the design of improvements to the Richmond Road/Chagrin Boulevard/I-271 corridor. This includes preliminary engineering, environmental services, and detailed design to widen the I-271 bridge and expand the Richmond-Chagrin intersection to improve traffic flow and safety. After applying up to $1.6 million in federal funding committed by the Ohio Department of Transportation, the city's cost will be $271,432.

Beachwood Welcomes New Leaders and Public Servants

The City of Beachwood recently celebrated three swearing-in ceremonies recognizing individuals committed to serving the community.

Traci Gallagher was sworn in as Beachwood's Building Commissioner. Gallagher began her career in 1993 through a five-year apprenticeship program with Plumbers Local 55 and later became a journeyman plumber. She joined the City of Beachwood in 2016 as a building, plumbing, and medical gas inspector, earned her Building Official certification in 2017, and was promoted to Assistant Building Commissioner in 2023.

The Beachwood Police Department also welcomed Officer Valeriia Litvina. Originally from Russia, Litvina immigrated to the United States at age 22 and earned her U.S. citizenship through military service. She serves as an Aerospace Medical Technician with the 178th Wing of the Ohio Air National Guard and holds a bachelor's degree in business management and service. She is fluent in Russian and understands Ukrainian.

Mayor Justin Berns administered the Oath of Office to Joshua Gerken, the newest member of the Beachwood Records Commission, which establishes rules governing the retention and disposal of city records.

FALL LOOSE-LEAF COLLECTION:

Loose-leaf pickup has begun and will continue through mid-December. Remember to rake leaves into piles on the tree lawn, free from other debris. Vehicles parked on the street may impede pickup.

Beachwood's 50-year residents attended the Senior Picnic on Aug. 31.

Senior Picnic Celebrates Beachwood's 50-Year Residents

More than 65 seniors gathered at the Beachwood Family Aquatic Center for the city's second annual Senior Picnic and 50-Year Resident Celebration. The afternoon featured food, music, games, giveaways and plenty of opportunities to connect with friends and neighbors.

A highlight of the event was to recognize Beachwood's newest 50-year residents. On behalf of Mayor Justin Berns and City Council, each honoree received a certificate and commemorative blanket in appreciation of their contributions to the community.

This year's honorees were Constancia Castro, Oscar Castro, Lynda Cohen, Helen Gewirtz, Paul Gewirtz, Cheryl Gutmacher, Norman Gutmacher, Alice Jacobs, Karen Kreinberg, Clara McCann, Paula Rollins, Martin Schneider, Tamara Schneider, Terry Silver, Eulogio Sioson, Marciana Sioson, Fred Teren and Betty Weber.

The city congratulates these longtime residents and thanks them for helping shape Beachwood into the community it is today.

The city also thanks the event's picnic partners: Cornerstone Caregiving, Find Senior Care Near Me, Prosper Life Care, Emunah Hospice, Silver Birch and DentaCard.

Beachwood Firefighters Turn a Rescue Call into a New Ride

Beachwood firefighters recently responded to help a young resident, Henry, whose leg became trapped between the pedal crank arm and frame after he fell from his bicycle. After several attempts to free him, the crew carefully used rescue spreaders to move the crank arm away from the frame. Thankfully, Henry was not injured, but his bicycle was damaged beyond repair.

Not wanting the accident to keep Henry from enjoying a beautiful day, the Station 1 A-shift crew reached out to REI at Pinecrest and located the same bicycle — with just one remaining in stock, fittingly in fire-engine red. The firefighters purchased the bike and personally delivered it to Henry only hours after the accident.

What began as a frightening morning ended with Henry back on two wheels — thanks to the Beachwood firefighters who saw an opportunity to help beyond the emergency call.

Beachwood Fire Department works to free Henry's leg.

Beachwood Joins Regional First CALL Initiative

Beachwood has joined First CALL — Crisis Assistance and Local Linkage — a regional program that helps first responders address calls involving mental health or behavioral health needs.

First CALL connects police officers, firefighter/paramedics, and dispatchers with licensed mental health professionals and trained peer support workers. These professionals can assist during crisis calls, provide follow-up support and connect residents and families with appropriate treatment and community resources.

The program began as a Shaker Heights pilot in 2022 and later expanded to Cleveland Heights, Richmond Heights, South Euclid and University Heights. Beachwood, Solon, Orange and Pepper Pike are now joining the initiative, expanding First CALL to nine participating communities.

For Beachwood, First CALL provides police and fire personnel with additional expertise and resources when responding to complex situations. The program does not replace traditional emergency services; it strengthens them by adding specialized mental health support to help first responders provide a more effective and comprehensive response.

Dog Paddle Makes an End-of-Summer Splash

Beachwood Family Aquatic Center welcomed the dog days of summer once again on Thursday, Sept. 10, with the city's final "Pool Pawty" of the 2026 season!

More than 80 playful pups wagged, splashed, and paddled their way through the evening, celebrating the end of the BFAC season in true tail-wagging style. From energetic jump-ins to leisurely float-arounds, dogs of all sizes enjoyed one last dip.

Binny's Recycling Tip: Break It Down!

Cardboard boxes are great for recycling, but Binny needs a little help before they go into your cart. Open the flaps and flatten each box completely.

Uncollapsed boxes take up valuable space, can blow into the street and may jam equipment at the recycling facility. Flattening them helps collection crews work efficiently and keeps our city cleaner.

Before recycling cardboard:

- Open all flaps and flatten every box
- Stack and bundle flattened boxes together
- Keep cardboard dry and secure

Don't box Binny in. Flatten your cardboard and help keep Beachwood recycling running smoothly!

Beachwood Travelers Enjoy Niagara-on-the-Lake

For 44 travelers and their Beachwood guides, Shannon Diamond and Jayme Jirousek, a recent trip to Niagara-on-the-Lake offered much more than beautiful scenery, memorable meals, and first-rate theater. It marked the welcome return of overnight group travel – and the beginning of a new tradition. Shannon is the city's program manager for events and camps, and Jayme is the senior adult manager.

The sold-out excursion, held in August, was Beachwood's first overnight group trip since 2019.

"We had a great time. Our group made some new friends and learned a little something about each place we visited," said Shannon. "I hope to see them all return in 2027."

The three-day itinerary blended architecture, history, culture, dining, and leisure, giving travelers plenty to experience together while also allowing time to explore on their own.

The trip began with a stop in Buffalo, New York, for a guided tour of Frank Lloyd Wright's Martin House. Built between 1903 and 1905 for Buffalo businessman Darwin D. Martin and his family, the residential complex is considered one of the greatest achievements of Wright's career.

After lunch at Buffalo's Canalside, the group continued across the border to Niagara-on-the-Lake, where travelers checked into the Pillar and Post hotel for a two-night stay. Set within a restored 19th-century building in the heart of historic Old Town, the hotel combines the character of the surrounding community with contemporary accommodations, gardens, dining and a spa.

The first evening concluded with dinner at the Prince of Wales, another of Niagara-on-the-Lake's distinctive historic properties.

The second day placed the spotlight on one of the town's best-known cultural institutions: the Shaw Festival. Travelers began with a backstage tour that offered a glimpse of the work involved in bringing a major theatrical production to life.

After time to explore the boutiques, antique shops, restaurants and tree-lined streets of downtown Niagara-on-the-Lake, the group returned to the Festival Theatre for a matinee performance of Funny Girl. The classic musical follows the rise of entertainer Fanny Brice and features such familiar songs as "People," "I'm the Greatest Star," and "Don't Rain on My Parade."

Dinner at Trius Winery gave the travelers another taste of the Niagara Peninsula, a region internationally known for its vineyards and ice wine. The group then returned to the theater for an evening performance of Amadeus, Peter Shaffer's celebrated drama about composers Antonio Salieri and Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

On the final morning, the group departed Niagara-on-the-Lake and returned to the Buffalo waterfront, where they boarded the Grand Lady for a two-hour buffet luncheon cruise featuring panoramic views of Buffalo Harbor. The relaxing cruise provided a fitting conclusion to three activity-filled days before returning to Beachwood.

Along the way, travelers had opportunities to discover the history behind their destinations.

"It was a wonderful, well-planned trip. We enjoyed two plays without having to drive, along with excellent meals, sightseeing and company," shared Julie Moss. "We hadn't visited Niagara-on-the-Lake in more than 20 years, and it was great fun to return."

"The city did an exceptional job organizing every detail, down to the last meal," added Jerry Moss, Julie's husband.

"The hotel, dining, programs, and sightseeing were all first-rate, and the entire trip was thoughtfully planned."

"This was our first overnight trip since 2019, so we're looking to use this momentum as a springboard to continue offering one or two trips annually," Jayme said.

Details for upcoming travel adventures will be announced early next year.

"I look forward to working with our students, staff, and parents and contributing to the continued success of the district."

Brown arrives after serving as Dean of Students at Shiloh Middle School in the Parma City School District since 2023. He also served as the Dean of Students at Pleasant Valley Elementary School - also in Parma Schools - for two years (2023-2025). Prior to moving into an administrative role, Brown spent 10 years as an intervention specialist, working at Euclid High School from 2019-2023 and at Grand Valley Local Schools from 2013-2019.

"Aaron's experiences working across elementary and middle school buildings make him an excellent fit for our district," Superintendent Robert Hardis said. "His student-centered approach, desire to learn and grow, ability to partner effectively with staff and families, and expertise in the varied ways students learn are important strengths that will benefit our students, staff, and district as a whole."

Alexander and Beasley Receive Crystal Apples

Beachwood High School Technology teacher Craig Alexander and Hilltop School Special Education Assistant Greg Beasley were presented with Crystal Apples at the annual Staff Convocation on Aug. 20 after receiving nominations by their colleagues for their exceptional commitment to the district and students.

BHS Principal Rebekah Sharpe, Assistant Principal Aubrei Watson, and Director of Curriculum & Instruction Paul Chase presented Alexander with his award and recognized him as the “heartbeat” of the building. Alexander was celebrated for his work behind the scenes with student leadership, coordinating events such as Homecoming, Prom, and Commencement, continuing building traditions.

“Craig is the person behind student leadership who doesn’t just advise a club on paper, but shows up, listens, and helps students turn their ideas into something real,” Watson said. “He is the person who, when something in this building needs doing, he is there, even after everyone is gone.”

Beasley was presented his award by Director of Pupil Services & Human Resources Jennifer Polak and Hilltop School principal Amy Pinney. They noted that Beasley is someone who truly represents the very best of Beachwood Schools, bringing energy and positivity to work every day.

“Some of his colleagues describe Greg as someone who is always there for the students and team, ready to make them smile, and finds a solution in every situation,” Pinney said, while Polak added, “Greg is someone whose hard work, compassion, and commitment to students makes a difference in this district every single day.”

Beachwood Schools Presents Cinderella as Fall Musical

From the iconic songs to the magical transformation and unforgettable characters, Cinderella offers something for everyone.

“We are excited to bring this production to the Beachwood community,” director Taylor Mortensen said. “Our cast and crew have been working hard to bring these characters and music to life and we can’t wait to share this story with our audiences.”

New Fitness Center Supported by Community Partnerships

Beachwood City Schools officially opened its new state-of-the-art fitness center at Beachwood High School with a ribbon cutting ceremony on Sept. 18. The facility will provide students with an exceptional space to train and also support rehabilitation and recovery.

The project received support from the Beachwood community. As part of a 10-year, $120,000 naming rights agreement, Jet's Pizza will support the outfitting of the facility, which will bear the name Jet's Pizza Bison Fitness Center. In addition, the facility will be sponsored by the Beachwood Athletic Boosters which contributed $110,000 toward the project for new equipment. Together, these investments will help create an outstanding training environment for current and future generations of Bison student-athletes.

"We are grateful to Rob Ferns and Jet's Pizza and the Beachwood Athletic Boosters for their tremendous support," said Beachwood Schools Superintendent Robert Hardis. "These partnerships will help enhance the athletic experience for all our students and sports teams."

Track State Champs Honored

Beachwood proudly celebrated its state champion girls track and field team prior to the season-opening football game on Aug. 21 with the unveiling of a championship banner at the entrance to the stadium. Surrounded by teammates, coaches, family, and friends, state champions Meena Abdul Bassar, Kyrsten Ginn, K'Dyn Harris-Tate, and Marley Readance were recognized for their achievement. The banner will now serve as a lasting tribute to their historic season and have a permanent place in the Beachwood community to commemorate their achievements. The quartet combined to score 53 points at the state meet, which included two individual state titles and two relay state titles, en route to the third state title in program and school history.

Designer Dress Days Returns to Legacy Village Oct. 16-18

Cleveland's popular three-day designer resale event offers incredible fashion finds while supporting Jewish Women in Action Cleveland's (JWA CLE) work throughout the community

Designer Dress Days (DDD), one of Cleveland's most anticipated designer resale events, returns to Legacy Village, Oct. 16-18, for three days of fashion, incredible finds, and shopping for a cause.

Hosted by JWA CLE, founded as National Council of Jewish Women/Cleveland (NCJW/CLE), DDD will take place at Legacy Village in the storefront across from Arhaus.

A longtime favorite among fashion lovers, bargain hunters, and savvy shoppers, DDD features an extraordinary selection of new and gently worn designer and high-end clothing, handbags, shoes, jewelry, furs and accessories – all at a fraction of their original retail prices. Shoppers can expect everything from timeless wardrobe staples to one-of-a-kind statement pieces and coveted designer labels.

New this year, personal shoppers will be available to help guests navigate the sale, find pieces that fit their style, and uncover some of DDD's best finds.

More than 250 volunteers help bring DDD to life each year, transforming thousands of donated pieces into a high-energy shopping experience with an even greater purpose. Proceeds from the event benefit JWA CLE and help support its work to empower children and youth, strengthen community engagement, support young people transitioning out of foster care, assist survivors of human trafficking, foster inclusion, inspire a love of reading and literacy, and advance social justice, advocacy, education, and meaningful community programming.

"Designer Dress Days brings together so many things we care about – fashion, sustainability, community, and giving back," said Janice Hirshon, vice president of retail. "There's such an excitement that comes with finding an amazing piece at an incredible price, but what makes DDD especially meaningful is knowing that every purchase helps us make an impact throughout our community."

For decades, DDD has given donated clothing and accessories a second life while generating critical support for the organization's work. The event also provides an opportunity for shoppers to embrace resale and sustainable fashion while discovering high-quality and designer pieces they may not find anywhere else.

JWA CLE is a community of volunteers and staff guided by Jewish values and rooted in the pursuit of dignity for all. The organization educates, advocates, and creates meaningful impact for individuals and families throughout Greater Cleveland.

Wendie Forman and Lisa Cynamon Mayers serve as co-presidents. Janice Hirshon serves as vice president of retail.

Welcome to Chagrin Valley Camera Club's 2026-2027 Season

by Debby Zelman Rapoport

The Chagrin Valley Camera Club has launched its 2026-2027 season, and as an active member I recommend it to anyone in Beachwood with an interest in photography.

The nonprofit club has about 70 active members from Beachwood and communities throughout Northeast Ohio. Presentations run on Zoom the first and third Tuesday of the month, September through May, at 7 p.m., so you can attend from home. Members also gather in person at the Beachwood Library for exhibitions and competitions.

Each season, the club welcomes nationally recognized photographers. This year's lineup includes Bobbi Lane, presenting "Venice Carnival" on Oct. 6; Angela Poggioni, presenting "The Gentle Red Giant" on Oct. 20; Lisa Cuchara, presenting "Wabi-Sabi" on Nov. 17; Susan Magnano, presenting "Illuminating Nightscapes: Mastering the Art of Light Painting" on Dec. 1; and Tomasz Trzebiatowski, editor in chief of FRAMES Magazine, who will be interviewed by Chad Barr, club president, in March.

Members exhibit their own work as well. The Nov. 3 member exhibition carries the theme "Imperfect Beauty: Texture, Age, Decay," and the club's annual May Show on May 4 is open to the public.

"We believe this will be our strongest season yet," said Chad. "I spent much of the summer connecting with world-class photographers and arranging presentations that will genuinely raise the bar for our club."

Photograph by Erwin Bruder, Chagrin Valley Camera Club member.

Expensive equipment and advanced experience are not required. Curiosity, an interest in photography, and a desire to learn are enough.

Curious? Come as a guest.

Prospective members are welcome to attend a meeting at no cost and with no obligation. Membership is $50 for the season. Visit chagrinvalleycameraclub.com.

Find Your Voice Now Announces Its New Book, We Hear You, With Beachwood Library Kickoff Event

For people carrying the pain of an unhealthy or toxic relationship, speaking about the experience can feel impossible. On Wednesday, Oct. 14, Find Your Voice Now will bring a message of understanding, healing, and hope to the Beachwood Library.

The program, beginning at 7 p.m., will introduce the community to Find Your Voice Now and its new book, We Hear You – a powerful collection of real stories, poems, and artwork from women who have turned pain into empowerment and silence into strength.

"Nobody needs to suffer alone," co-founder Annie Roth said. "Anyone in an unhealthy or toxic relationship now has a place where they can share and be heard."

Annie and Mary Ellen Bartlett founded Find Your Voice Now after meeting unexpectedly on a cross-country flight. During their conversation, the two women discovered that they had traveled remarkably similar paths through toxic and coercive relationships. Both understood what it was like to face those experiences largely alone and without the kind of peer support they needed.

That encounter grew into the creation of this nonprofit, which is dedicated to ensuring others would not have to walk the same path in isolation.

Founded in 2022, Find Your Voice Now is a free, inclusive, peer-support community created by survivors. It provides nonclinical support, education, and resources for people navigating toxic, coercive, confusing, or abusive relationships in their personal or professional lives.

The organization has grown to approximately 4,000 members around the world, with regularly scheduled meetings that follow a guided discussion on a pre-determined topic. Participants may share their experiences, listen to others, or simply absorb the reassurance that they are not alone.

Originally created for women, the organization now includes groups for Hispanic women, men, and LGBTQ+, with plans to create groups for teens and veterans.

"Healing often begins by finding a person or community that makes you feel safe enough to speak honestly," Annie said. "The only way to heal is to find support where you feel comfortable sharing your circumstances with someone."

We Hear You was created as a labor of love. Authored by Annie, Mary Ellen, and Renee Cavanagh, the book gathers approximately 30 testimonials from women around the world who found the courage to tell their stories. Their experiences include human trafficking, domestic violence, coercive control, manipulation, and narcissistic abuse in many kinds of relationships.

Poetry is interspersed throughout the collection, along with artwork intended to reflect the emotions expressed in the stories.

The foreword was written by therapist and author Nadine Macaluso, whose former marriage inspired the character played by Margot Robbie in The Wolf of Wall Street. Nadine has spoken and written about breaking free from an unhealthy relationship and rebuilding her life.

By bringing together testimony, poetry, and visual art, Find Your Voice Now hopes the book will become both a source of comfort and a practical companion for readers. Someone who recognizes part of their own experience in another woman's story may begin to understand what is happening to them – and take a first step toward seeking support.

"Healing often begins by finding a person or community that makes you feel safe enough to speak honestly."

– Annie Roth

The book is available on Amazon and Bookshop.org, and copies will be available at the library event.

A recent VIP event was especially meaningful to Annie and Mary Ellen because it raised awareness of Find Your Voice Now and demonstrated the organization's growing impact and momentum – work that also earned Annie recognition from Nexstar's Fox 8 Cleveland as Cleveland's Remarkable Woman of 2026, one of 125 women selected from more than 12,000 nominees nationwide.

A pickleball fundraiser also brought supporters, donors, and local mental and physical health organizations together for a day that included play, raffle prizes, and opportunities to learn about community resources.

The organization is also developing a web-based app powered by Experience Knows (experienceknows.com) – created by Annie's sons, Taylor and Zachary Ginis – to provide a readily accessible peer-support space because people experiencing difficulty should not have to travel the road alone.

Find Your Voice Now does not provide therapy or replace professional medical, legal or mental-health services. Its role is to offer lived-experience-based peer support – a community where people can speak, listen, build relationships and begin identifying the next steps that feel right for them.

"Support is available," Annie said. "You are not alone. You are heard. You matter."

Spruce Up Your Home: Why Your Environment Matters

There's something about fall that makes us pause. Temperatures cool, colors change, the air feels crisper, and we suddenly become more aware of the spaces in which we live – how they look, function, and make us feel. It's no coincidence. As the seasons shift, our instincts urge us to create warmth and comfort before winter settles in.

According to the Institute for Integrative Nutrition, that instinct isn't just about creating cozy vibes. Their research shows that true well-being depends on balance in 12 key areas of life, one being home environment.

Your home is more than walls and furniture. It's where daily life unfolds. Science has shown that your environment actively influences your mental and physical health. Clutter and disorganization are linked to higher stress hormones, while light-filled, welcoming spaces can boost mood, focus, and even sleep quality. In other words: How you feel at home matters as much as what you eat or how often you exercise.

This fall, why not give your home the attention it deserves? By making simple, smart changes, you're not just refreshing your space, you're strengthening the foundation for overall health.

Turn Up the Comfort

Nothing beats walking into a warm, welcoming home on a chilly autumn evening.

But comfort doesn't happen by accident, it starts with preparation. Scheduling a fall HVAC tune-up ensures your system is ready for the months ahead. Beyond keeping your family cozy, it improves energy efficiency, lowers monthly bills, and reduces the risk of unexpected breakdowns in the dead of winter.

Protect Your Irrigation System

Before freezing temperatures arrive, winterize your irrigation system to prevent trapped water from cracking pipes, valves, and sprinkler heads. A professional blowout clears remaining water and helps protect your system from costly damage. Taking care of it this fall means fewer surprises – and a smoother start when it's time to water again in spring.

Refresh Your Space

Fall is the perfect time to make your home feel more inviting. A comfortable sofa, a cozy accent chair, or a beautiful new dining set can refresh a room while making it more functional for everyday living and seasonal gatherings. Look for rich colors, warm wood tones, and soft, durable fabrics that bring comfort and character to your space. Even one thoughtfully chosen piece can give your home a fresh look for the season ahead.

Light and Warmth

As days grow shorter, we naturally crave light. Fresh window coverings can completely transform the look and feel of a room, softening natural light during the day and creating privacy and warmth at night. This season, think cozy fabrics, layered textures, or sleek modern blinds that make a statement. Even one update – a new set of drapes in the living room or shades in the bedroom – can shift the mood of your home instantly.

Fresh Starts

Sometimes sprucing up your environment goes beyond décor or repairs and means starting somewhere new. Fall is actually one of the smartest times to buy or rent a new home. With fewer people shopping, you'll find less competition and more motivated sellers. For buyers, there are experienced realtors waiting to help. For renters, it's an opportunity to lock in a great deal because fewer people are moving.

Fall is more than a season – it's an opportunity. By refreshing your home now, you're setting the stage for a healthier, more joyful winter. Your home is where health begins. So light that candle, sip your tea, and ask: What small changes could enhance your home environment? Chances are, the benefits from your updates will ripple far beyond your four walls.

On Point: Joseph Guth Earns a Place on the U.S. National Team

On Sept. 15, Joseph Guth received the gift he had been awaiting for seven years: an official invitation to join the United States National Fencing Team in the cadet category, which is open to fencers ages 17 and younger.

Joseph is a 16-year-old foil fencer who trains at Cleveland Fencing Academy in Beachwood.

The top 20 cadet fencers in the United States compete abroad. Joseph's first tournament will take place Oct. 17 and 18 in Samorin, Slovakia. He will represent the United States both individually and as a member of one of its five teams.

Joseph is currently ranked No. 13 in the country.

At the next stage – the junior level, which includes college freshmen and younger competitors – only 12 fencers will be invited. Joseph is working hard to reach that level.

He has competed internationally, winning both the Canadian National Championships and the prestigious Paris Fencing Marathon this past year.

His training program includes weight, balance, coordination, and speed training three days a week, as well as weapons training and bouts four days a week. In addition, he competes in tournaments in the United States and abroad nearly every other weekend.

Joseph picked up his first weapon at age 6 in Miami. When his parents moved to Cleveland for the area's quality of life and excellent schools, he continued training in Cleveland Heights. Six years ago, his father, Eric, opened the Cleveland Fencing Academy on Commerce Park in Beachwood so Joseph could train competitively. It is the second-largest fencing academy between New York and Los Angeles. Introductory classes are offered through Beachwood Community Services and directly through the academy.

Joseph has worked hard academically and athletically, becoming a two-time first-team Academic All-American and first-team Athletic All-American with the United States Fencing Association.

"Fencing has taught me many life skills, such as quick thinking and critical analysis," Joseph said. "I'm grateful to have seen so much of the world through fencing, to have met so many interesting people, and to have made so many friends. I'm very proud to share this with our community."

Joseph said the most unique experience he has had in the sport so far was training with the Russian and Turkish national teams in Istanbul this past summer in preparation for the United States Summer National Championships.

"Despite political differences, we all got along really well and did lots of fun things together off the fencing strip," he said.

Ahmad Taqi, his Kuwaiti strength-and-conditioning and strip coach, said, "Joseph is in a special situation, coming from a small-market fencing club. His making the team is especially sweet because nobody expected a kid from Ohio to get this far. He is a champ for allowing us to use him as our guinea pig in training so we can understand how to help our students reach this level. He puts up with a lot, and we know he'll crush it in Slovakia this month!"

"I'm grateful to have seen so much of the world through fencing, to have met so many interesting people, and to have made so many friends."

– Joseph Guth

Joseph Guth wins the gold at the Paris Fencing Marathon, which attracts the best fencers in the world from 17 different countries.

The Old Man and the Music

Four years ago, Bob Wyman's friend, Stuart Fenton, told him about the remarkable music he was discovering on YouTube – performances by gifted singers and musicians from outside the United States whom most Americans had never heard of.

"Open YouTube," Stuart told Bob. "You won't believe what's out there."

He was right.

Bob, a Beachwood resident, is now on a mission. "I want to introduce others to the extraordinary musical talent I have discovered from around the world," he said. "In these unsettled times, beautiful music can be soothing: It can lift our spirits, quiet our minds, and remind us how much joy and goodness still exists. Finding these artists has brought enormous cheer into my life, and I want to share that feeling with as many people as possible."

Under the title The Old Man and the Music, Bob's YouTube podcast introduces listeners to talented musicians from around the globe.

Bob's passion for music began at a young age. His father loved the legendary Italian tenor Enrico Caruso, and he grew up listening to Frank Sinatra. He also enjoyed listening to classical music, played the trumpet, tried the drums, and freely admitted that he was a mediocre musician.

"Over the years, I have enjoyed everything from folk and pop to orchestral music," he said. "But YouTube opened an entirely new musical world to me."

One of his first great discoveries was Il Volo, the Italian operatic-pop trio. The group began when three young singers appeared individually on an Italian television talent show. A producer recognized what their voices might accomplish together, and the new trio was born.

"I have seen Il Volo three times," Bob told me. "Although they are internationally famous, many people in the United States still do not know them. That is exactly why I want to spread the word."

Another favorite is Lucy Thomas, a young British singer with exceptional tone, clarity, and control.

Then there is Helene Fischer, one of Europe's biggest stars. She performs in several languages, and her command of English is so natural that listeners might never guess she is German.

Belgian singer Dana Winner offers another example. Her interpretation of "One Moment in Time," made famous by Whitney Houston, is stunning. She has also recorded memorable versions of songs by ABBA.

Additional discoveries include British pop musician Luke Silva; singer, actress, and performer Emilie Cunliffe; the European Pop Orchestra, led by Maestro Guido Dieteren; and Life in 3D, the Vedder siblings.

"These performers sing pop, classical, folk, musical-theater, and crossover music," Bob said.

Bob Wyman, creator of
The Old Man and The Music

"Some appear on major stages, while others first attracted attention through television talent competitions or online videos.

"What they share is tremendous ability and the power to move an audience," he added. "Anyone can make these discoveries. You may begin with a familiar song, notice an unfamiliar singer, and suddenly find yourself exploring music from Italy, Belgium, Germany, Britain, or another part of the world. That is how my list keeps growing"

To date, Bob has created four Old Man and the Music episodes and hopes to share new selections about twice a month. "I want to create a community of people who love good voices, fine musicianship, and songs that bring joy.

"Every great new performance gives me a total high. The music is out there – my mission is to help listeners experience it and share it."

"If you know a wonderful singer, group, or orchestra that isn't well known, please tell me," he said. "I love doing this because every great new performance gives me a total high. The music is out there – my mission is to let listeners know about it, experience it, and share it."

The Old Man and the Music is on YouTube. To recommend an artist or learn more, contact Bob at bob.wyman@energy-costsavers.com or 216.287.1531.
